

Standards for the Toy Poodle

General Appearance:	Small but stately stance, squarely built with an air of elegance and dignity, very lively and active.
Head:	Flat cheekbones on a rounded skull with a slight but definite stop, give this dog a lean and well chiseled look. The dark almond shaped eyes are set wide apart with an alert intelligent expression. The abundantly feathered, long, wide ears are set low and hang close to the face.
Body:	Well proportioned with the shoulder blades well laid back. The forelegs are straight and muscular as are the hind legs. The back is short and straight. The chest is set deep with well sprung ribs. The high set tail is carried erect. The tail is customarily docked to a moderate length, so as to give an overall balanced look.
Color/Coat:	The abundant, dense, rather harsh textured coat may be any solid color. Parti-colored (two or more colors) usually disqualifies a dog for a show. As the poodle does not shed its fur, it needs regular grooming and clipping There are four styles of clipping commonly used for show dogs. <ul style="list-style-type: none">1) Puppy clip2) Sporting clip3) English saddle4) European Continental clip The nose, lips, and eye-rims are dark, but vary in accordance with coat color
Size:	Females: Up to 10 inches // 6 pounds Males: up to 10 inches // 6 pounds
Temperament:	Good natured, lively, intelligent, friendly and very loyal, the toy poodle is a very active and high strung breed.
